are to be obtained almost anywhere. Fruit, grocery and variety stores-they all carry a small quantity of this delicious and most nutritious of all Fruits. But no one carries the quality and quantity that we always carry, for the simple reason that we sell more Grapefruits than any of those stores combined. The reason that we sell more is very simple. First of all, we buy a big quantity. Fruit of all kinds when first in the market is a little green. To dispose of such Fruit in that condition, it may attract attention by its good looks, but it doesn't please the taste as well as the eye. Consequently, we fully ripen our fruit in a cool place, instead of a hot place, as the old system calls for. When ripened in perfect condition, we dispose of them in a way to please the most fastidious people.

In other words, when our Grapefruit (and the same may be said about our Oranges) are offered for sale, they are juicy, fully ripe, and you get them at the time of their most beneficial condition.
